

Home	News	What's On	Features	Culture	Sport	Opinions	About	Advertising
Bugle

Search Brixton Blog

Coming this September: Brixton Design Trail

Written by Ruth Waters on August 13, 2015 in Art, Culture - 2 Comments

The Street Gallery – part of the Brixton Design Trail – an outdoor public exhibition featuring ten large-scale canvases on the facades of the former Bon Marche department store

Following the success of Brixton Design Week in 2014, local artists, designers and creative businesses are back with Brixton Design Trail from 19-27 September 2015, part of the London Design Festival.

The Design Trail will showcase the wealth of home-grown design talent the area has to offer. A series of free events and installations will be held in key locations including Brixton's High Street, Reliance Arcade, Pop Brixton and the Black Cultural Archives.

Although the full details of all the events and artists taking part are still to be confirmed, the organisers have already announced an outdoor exhibition of ten jumbo canvases on the walls of the former Bon Marche (pictured above), the transformation of the BCA's courtyard by local designers into a Georgian pleasure garden using their current The Black Georgians exhibitions for inspiration, and a series of design events at Pop Brixton and Reliance Arcade.

Find out more about the programme here - full details will be announced at the beginning of September.

Job opportunities at Satay
WHERE BRIXTON MEETS BALI AND BEYOND!

We are currently seeking dedicated, experienced individuals to join our team. We have positions open in both Management and Bar/Wait staff. If you are interested in applying and for further information please get in touch via elly.foster@sataybar.co.uk

The Brixton Bonus

However you spend your £1000 prize Brixton wins too

To find out more or to enter visit brixtonpound.org/brixton-bonus

 BRIXTON BONUS

Are you ready to take your next step this summer?

Apply now

 Lambeth College
The Careers College

