If we had to think of one home that epitomizes the new season, we'd have to go with the Mayfair house in London.

According to Design Milk, architect and design firm Squire and Partners covered part of this home's exterior with 4,000 folded aluminum leaves. It's a truly amazing facade that hides a part of a pretty normal-looking building. Squire and Partners' website says that the home has been praised for "raising the bar for design," and we seriously can't argue with that.
