Flexible workspace operator x+why secures two London locations

By Riya Makwana | Tue 18 May 2021

Flexible workspace firm x+why has secured two new London offices, at The Courtenay Group's The Fulwood in Midtown and Huguenot Place in Spitalfields.

4/4

The sites bring the workspace provider's total footprint up to 300,000 sq ft across the UK.

Squire & Partner was the lead architect on both buildings.

Co-founder of x+why Rupert Dean said: "This space expands the geography and size of our London offerings and helps place us among the fastest growing flexible workspace specialists in the UK – a feat we are particularly proud to have achieved during a global pandemic and proving market confidence in our forward-thinking model.

"All our spaces are designed and operated in as sustainable a way as possible – from the supply chain for our fit outs, to the way waste is collected and
