Squire & Partners design striking commercial towers in Southbank, London

Séan Thurgood

1 hour ago

The three structures are part of the new Triptych Bankside development

Forming a new part of the central London skyline, the development is a mixed-use group of three towers across a 68,000 sq ft plot. The first two towers are occupied by 169 luxury apartments which the third features 9,900 sq ft of retail space.

Residents and locals will have access to a 7,000 sq ft climbing gym, an independent ethical, and sustainable coffee company, and several other developments which are already signing up for the space. The developers of the building, JTRE London, are also planning to have a 4,000 sq ft headquarter office on the 4th floor, while other large corporate groups have been slated to occupy the 7th floor.

“ With Triptych Bankside, we are creating an outstanding development that combines eye-catching architecture, stylish interior design and high quality finishes. The unprecedented demand for space we’re seeing from international and growing companies for One Triptych Place is testament to the design, location and appeal of the building.

Nigel Fleming, Sales & Marketing Director of JTRE London

The building has already been awarded BREEAM ‘Excellent’ and a WiredScore Platinum certification, making it one of the only buildings in Europe to achieve that standard.
